

Jessica Tice

Jessica Tice found her penchant for creativity inspired by her family's numerous travels throughout the years. She openly shares her most devastating memory from early childhood: the sight of a box of melted crayons—she's never been the same since!

Having recently received her BFA from the Pratt Institute in Communications Design, Jessica's artistic efforts are concentrated in illustration. Her love for watercolor and interactive mediums led her to collaborate with the world-renowned Pop-Up Studio of Robert Sabuda & Matthew Reinhart as a Senior Designer and Paper Engineer. Working for the children's book powerhouse, her contributions to their bestselling titles can be seen in bookstores nationwide, on television, and of course, across the World Wide Web. She often visits family and friends in Tucson and draws inspiration from the beautiful Sonoran landscape.
